OHIO EDISON FRANCHISE

Many are inclined to wonder why there is so much discussion and delay in granting a 25-year franchise to the Ohio Edison company when, by so doing, the city would lose nothing, would not be tying its own hands, would not be granting any special privileges, would not even be granting this company an exclusive right to operate in the city.

The subject of debate is not so much the renewing of the franchise as the length of the franchise. Councilmen haven't been able to find anything wrong with the provisions of the franchise—which are practically the same as those governing the one in existence the last 24 years—but because they can't find any objections, two or three councilmen are afraid there's a "nigger in the woodpile somewhere".

If that were the case, the councilmanic body which granted the franchise 24 years ago took a big chance. In the intervening years, however, no one, white or colored, has been smoked out of the woodpile. The company has had 24 years in which to prove itself and to improve its position, and it has done both nobly. It wants another 25-year franchise now to support an expansion program which will benefit the city in increased taxes, increased payroll and improved service. It needs the backing of such a franchise to help it finance its building program.

There should be no confusion, on the part of council nor of the public, between the franchise sought and a rate contract. The latter is not up for consideration at the moment—only the question of a franchise to operate. That does not exclude the city, nor any other competitor, from entering the electric power field in Salem at any time during the next 25 years. It does not preclude the possibility of demands for rate adjustments at any time during that period. In brief, the city would be giving nothing away, except the right to operate, which right is also retained for anyone else. It now is considering legislation to grant a 10-year franchise to a company it knows nothing about, to operate busses in the city. Why, then, could there be objection to a 25-year franchise for a company which has operated here for 24 years in a most satisfactory manner.

BANG! BANG!

The economy drive was going great guns up to the dawn of last Saturday. It actually looked as though it might get someplace at last.

Enter then, Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States, commander in chief of the army and navy. Mr. Roosevelt was fresh from the war games in the Caribbean. His mind was preoccupied with thoughts of defending the United States.

In his first speech upon returning to land he lambasted the daylighters out of the dictatorships. In his first official move, he asked congress to appropriate a flat $124,000,000 supplementary item to an army appropriation bill already calling for half a billion dollars.

Anyone who dares to suggest that the army of a nation which isn't preparing to pick a war doesn't need $124,000,000 in addition to half a billion will find his patriotism and good sense cast in doubt. There will be, consequently, few squawks.

Bang! Bang! goes the national defense program. Bang! goes the economy program. Or does it just go—plunk?

BOILING

That plume of smoke rising through the trees in the woodlot puzzled many of last Sunday's drivers and riders when first they saw it.

Looking more closely they saw a haze of steam under the smoke and made out the outlines of a sugar house through the screen of tree trunks and underbrush.

Inside, the syrup makers were "boiling." They've started early this year. They will have to work fast if the warm weather continues. Soon the sap will taste "buddy."

Syrup making is one of Ohio's picturesque industries. The whole process, beginning with the natural phenomenon of sap rising in the trunk of the tree and ending with a gush of delicious maple syrup over a pancake, is out of the ordinary.

It's one of those things everybody would like to do if he had a chance, and there's no higher recommendation for a job than that.

PASSIVE

It has been a long time since Mahatma Gandhi hit the front pages of American newspapers. More spectacular methods of action have replaced his standby—passive resistance.

But as he begins another fast to win his way in a question of Indian politics it remains true that passive resistance, the way the Mahatma practices it, is a powerful weapon.

It puts the opposition at a disadvantage from the start. The passive resister enlists pity as an ally. By seeming to be willing to die for his beliefs he becomes a martyr. His opponent becomes a persecutor. Mahatma Gandhi, who learned his way about England as a young man, has put the empire in a hole before by fasting and at the advanced age of 70 still is a burr under the lion's tail. There's nothing so hard to handle as a man with an idea and the spunk to lie down to die for it.

POLLYANNA

Pollyanna is up to her old pranks. Spring has arrived in March. Everything's going to be all right. Maybe so. There hasn't been a war scare in Europe for a couple of days either, and March is the month when scares are expected.

So we must be bright, like Pollyanna. Spring is going to come early, and it won't bring war with it. There will be no big winds and no big incidents, no sudden chills either in temperature or international relations.

Pollyanna again is the world's sweetheart—but oh so fickle! Anyway, she always has been. Perhaps it's going to be different this time, though.

THE STARS SAY:

For Wednesday, March 8.

A lively and exciting day, with much commotion and perhaps agitation, is forecast by the lunar transits. Things will move under high pressure, with a fine spurt of initiative and enterprise to bring about very desirable culminations of both a practical and romantic nature. Transactions with large interests are probable through new constructive propositions. These may best be attained by shrewd or subtle bargaining, or wire pulling.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may look forward to a very lively and interesting year, with happy fruition of constructive effort and fond ambitions. Practical and soundly-developed projects, with energy and initiative, may find staunch supporters in big business. Cooperation is probable through shrewd or undercover agreements, rather than by direct action.

A child born on this day may have much creative talent, with aggressive and enterprising initiative, although it should not be wanting in measures of tact, diplomacy and finesse. Its versatility assures an active and successful career.

A LENTEN THOUGHT

By S. TALMAGE MAGANN, President, Salem Ministerial Association.

A HAPPY FAMILY

Read Luke 10:30-37. Our scripture lesson today reminds me of a family I have known for many years. It consisted of a father, mother, two daughters and four sons. A strong Christian influence was always present in their home, proving a source of mutual happiness and help.

The father had only a moderate income, but he was thrifty and managed to save some of it. The oldest son early made a success as a banker. He joined with the father in helping the second son start a successful printing business and weekly newspaper. This opened the way for the third son to learn the printing business and he became an expert on the linotype.

The oldest daughter early married a successful business man. The second daughter, through family assistance, was able to become a trained nurse. When the youngest son finished High school the various members of the family cooperated in sending him to college for training as an engineer. The father and mother passed on a few years ago, but the other members of the family are in their various fields of labor, very happy and successful because early in life they learned to cooperate.

The gospel of love seeks to unite the world as one great family under the Fatherhood of God. Such a union would raise the whole standard of life. Jesus pointed to the act of the good Samaritan and said, "Go, and do thou likewise."

Prayer: Lead us, O Lord, into a faithful and constant practice of the Law of Love. In this we will learn to share; helping less fortunate neighbors to help themselves. Amen.

Candy Has Distinct Place
In Diet, Clendening Says

BY LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
THE DEAD average of opinion about candy as a food would probably be based on the old principle that whatever is pleasant is bad for you. The Puritan is still in our midst and still is likely to say, whenever he sees anybody enjoying himself, something such as, "I wouldn't eat any more of that candy if I were you; it isn't good for you."

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

But candy as a food has a great many individual virtues, and has a distinct place in dietary needs. The principal ingredient of candy is glucose (which comes from the Greek word glukos, meaning sweet). Most candy contains other materials with distinct food value, but sugar in its several outstanding forms is so outstanding a part of it that appraisal of the dietary values of the products amounts, for all practical purposes, to appraisal of the sugar that makes up its bulk.

Admitting that candy is not a balanced diet what, we may ask, is the value of glucose? Foods have three main functions—to furnish energy, to build tissue and to regulate the body processes. The mineral elements and the vitamins are the body regulators; the proteins are the body builders, and, par excellence, glucose is the energy food of the body.

People differ considerably in their need of glucose and in their utilization of it. Of course, we know that a supply of energy fuel in excess of normal energy demands will be transformed into fat and deposited in the tissues, but, on the contrary, a great many people do not have an easily available supply of glucose to meet their regular daily needs; this results in a condition of chronic fatigue.

Two distinguished Yale physiologists, Dr. Howard Haggard and Dr. Leon A. Greenburg, have published observations on industrial and occupational fatigue. On the basis of their tests it appears that the efficiency of those engaged in factory occupations is improved by more frequent feeding than is the habit of the bulk of the American people. When two extra small meals, one in mid-morning and one in mid-afternoon, were added to the regular diet, the occupational efficiency of those on whom these experiments were made was enhanced. Occupational fatigue is, to a considerable extent, due to depletion of energy supply, and this is most easily made up by the use of glucose.

Subject of Tests
Chronic fatigue in school children has also been the subject of experiments by members of the Department of Physiology at the University of Chicago. Their recommendations are that symptoms of fatigue in children may be alleviated by the eating of candy or glucose before and during play or exercise. Candy given at the time of the greatest energy output, such as after-school hours, performs a very definite function in the alleviation of the effects of constant energy depletion.

Telephone Service

PROTECTS THE WHOLE FAMILY

● A telephone brings aid quickly in fire, illness and other emergencies. With small children in the house, it is highly important to have this quick access to medical aid, especially at night when stores are closed and neighbors are asleep.

In affording you this protection, the telephone's usefulness just begins, because every day it saves you tiresome steps. It eliminates trips to the store and other errands which can be done easily by telephone. It also brings you pleasure and satisfaction in talks with friends. When it costs so little, why be without the protection and convenience of telephone service.

THE OHIO BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY

"ENVOY EXTRAORDINARY" by E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

CHAPTER XXXI

Matresser, seated in the chair reserved for distinguished visitors, remained in a dubious frame of mind. He had just reported to Sir Francis that he was returning from Germany by airplane after the secret European peace conference.

"It is very kind of you, Sir Francis," he acknowledged, "and I am glad to hear that matters are moving along smoothly, but I cannot accept any portion of the credit. I am just glad the good luck to know certain facts which helped your plan."

Sir Francis smiled patiently.

"You must believe me," Matresser went on gravely, "that it is not from any feelings of discourtesy or disloyalty that I am anxious to bring my job to an end. My mother is in very delicate health and I have promised her definitely to settle down at home. I feel that I have been away so much that I should dedicate my time during these last few years of her life towards following out her wishes."

Your mother is the last person in the world," Sir Francis said, "who would interfere when a man is called upon to serve his country. But now we discuss what may lie beyond, just now? We will leave that for the present. You landed here this morning, having brought to a conclusion your part in a most marvelous task which—I speak advisedly—Matresser will probably go further towards securing the peace of the world than any single action of any single man. But we do not enter upon a general discussion at the present moment."

"We are up against one bald fact. His Majesty is doing me the honor of attending my wife's reception tonight and he has expressed his wish to meet you here. A wish expressed in such language, my dear fellow, can only be dealt with in one way. It is a command."

"You are convincing, Sir Francis," his visitor sighed. "I shall be your guest, then, at nine o'clock this evening."

"At half-past eight, if you please. We dine early because the reception is at ten o'clock and His Majesty announced his intention of arriving early. Tomorrow morning you will be free to leave for home. Believe me, I am grateful to you," he added, as he rose and held out his hand.

Matresser took his leave and was driven to his town house. In one of the bachelor suites, Pilot Number 17 was lying in an easy chair with a pile of newspapers and a half-empty tankard by his side.

"No luck, my young friend," his host announced. "It's London for another twelve hours for me at any rate."

"That is not so bad for me. Your beer is very good," the young man in the chair smiled. "I am in great comfort. I shall stay over with much pleasure."

"I shall have to leave you to your bed tonight," Matresser told him as he sank into an easy chair and a cigar.

Pilot Number 17 grinned.

"I have been in London before," he confessed. "I amuse myself."

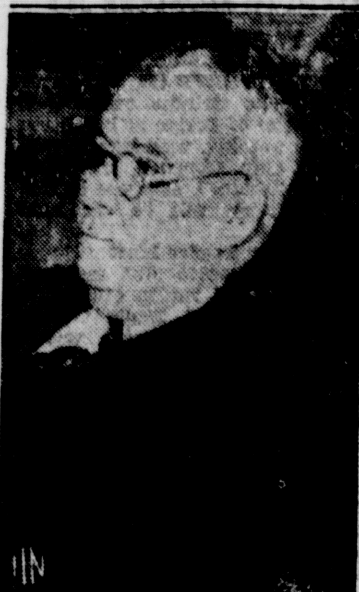

"Just how?" his host enquired.

"I tell you," the young man replied. "Why not? Soon I change my clothes. Your servants here are all wonderful. Everything is already prepared for me. I go to a small club. We are all Germans. We are not all high born but we are of those who take our country seriously. Many friends of my student days are there. We shall eat together and drink wine or beer. Afterwards there are some cafes. We shall amuse ourselves without a doubt. On my dressing table in the morning I shall look for a message from you. I shall be at Heston and before you wish to start and you will find our beautiful butterfly plane polished and shining, ready for that little hop to Norfolk. And you—move tonight in high places?"

"Not of my own will," Matresser laughed, "but it must be done."

"I wish they wouldn't send you to Berlin!" Pilot Number 17 exclaimed fervently.

Ohioans In Washington

Highlights On Legislative Activities

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Investigators for the Dies committee on un-American activities are likely to make Ohio one of their hunting grounds for evidence of subversive influence.

Nine investigators have been sent into the field to spend the next three or four months gathering evidence to be presented at hearings here next summer.

Their names and the cities to which they were sent were kept secret by committee members for fear publicity might hamper their inquiries.

One member, however, said it would be a "good guess" that Ohio, with its industrial cities, would be one of the sections.

Chairman Keller (D-Ill.) of the house library committee has promised early action on a bill by Representative Hess (R-Ohio) to transfer to Washington from Cincinnati historical papers concerning the conspiracy trial of Aaron Burr.

Hess introduced a measure to remove the papers from the custody of the federal district court at Cincinnati to the congressional library here. It was likely, however, that the library committee would transfer them to the new federal archives building.

The papers—including letters by Burr's confederates concerning his plan to found an empire in the United States—have been in custody of Harry Raabe, clerk of the Cincinnati district court, who took personal charge of them when the old federal building there was razed to make way for the new one.

Raabe said the papers were in temporary custody of Federal District Judge Robert R. Nevins of Dayton, who wanted to examine them.

Representative Claypool (D-Ohio) has recommended Russell G. Perrill of Ashville, O., in Pickaway county, to carry one of the highest paid and longest rural mail routes in the country. The route, out of Ashville, pays about $3,000 a year.

Book Club Members Hear Story Of Travelers Aid

The valuable and extensive service rendered young, old or inexperienced travelers by the Travelers Aid society, was explained in an interesting talk at the meeting of Book club in the library assembly room Monday by Miss Hazel Young of Cleveland, head of the publicity department of the society.

Miss Young explained that the first organization to aid travelers was started in St. Louis, Mo., by a man who had been helped at one time by people of that city. In the early years of the century when the industrial age was dawning it became increasingly necessary for some sort of agency for the care and guidance of people who came to cities to find employment, people who were inexperienced in traveling.

Contrary to the popular belief the now national and international organization is not supported by the railroads but by the Community chest, locally. Space is provided in terminals and stations for offices by the railroads but funds to help those in distress are derived from the chest funds of the city in which the bureau is located. The Salem representative, the speaker pointed out, is the Red Cross.

The Travelers Aid worker is called upon to solve all kinds of family problems, investigate stories of individuals to determine the best course to follow in dealing with their cases and they face many difficult and unfortunate situations in solving the problems.

They deal with all travelers, young, old, ill, blind, deaf, lame, foreign, moneyless, stranded, runaways and transients. The Travelers Aid society is the only agency engaged in such work, which also includes much social service which is designed to help the non-resident person. Each community has its organization to aid residents of that city or town but the Travelers Aid is the only one which is open to people who do not belong in the place where they meet difficulties.

There are branches of the society in nearly every large city in the United States and in practically every nation of the world.

Miss Young cited incidents in the work of the travelers aid in Cleveland, picturing the varied and extremely beneficial work it does. Other numbers of the program included: Roll call. Criticisms of the movies; a report of a recent town and federation meeting in Youngstown by Mrs. Harold Wyckoff, who attended with Mrs. W. D. King, president, and several other Book club members; a paper, "News Flashes," Mrs. Marie Wigert; paper, "Industrial Schools for Boys and Girls," Mrs. C. L. Hartung; paper, "State Farms for Men and Women," prepared by Mrs. T. V. Yates and read by Mrs. Wyckoff.

Mrs. Carl Willman introduced the speaker, Miss Young.

Musical entertainment was presented by the Junior High School Girls Glee club, directed by Miss Doris Tetlow. The group, accompanied by Mrs. F. J. Stoudt, sang "The Bells of St. Mary's," "Cheri Berti Bim," "On Parade" and "The Umbrella Man."

Mrs. Ross Clay, next year's president, announced the following program committee for the year: Mrs. George Votaw, Mrs. Phil Chancelor and Mrs. B. G. Ludwig.

The next meeting of the club will be held jointly with the Leornians club in the assembly room at the library at 8 p. m. Monday, March 20.

The Leornians will provide the program and Book club members will serve tea afterward.

Stitch and Chatter Club Convenes

Stitch and Chatter club members were entertained last night at the home of Miss Jayne Courtney on the Ellsworth rd.

Members presented a shower of miscellaneous gifts to Mrs. Irvin McLaughlin, formerly Miss Sara Spiker, who was married recently.

Miss Courtney entertained with piano and vocal selections.

Plans were made for a roller skating party to be held Thursday night at Lake park near Alliance.

The hostess served a delightful buffet lunch.

The meeting Monday night will be held at the home of Mrs. Carl Flitcraft, near Salem.

Christian Missionary Meeting Arranged

The annual evening meeting of the Women's Missionary society of the Christian church will be held at 7:30 p. m. Wednesday in the church.

A benefit party will be held in connection with the evening session. Mrs. Fred Rogers and Mrs. L. E. Berry are chairman of the divisions in charge of the party.

Will Meet Thursday

The meeting of the Musical Culture club has been postponed from tonight until Thursday at the home of Miss Kathryn Frech on East Sixth st. The change was made to avoid conflict with the Salem High school band concert tonight.

Meeting Postponed

The regular meeting of the Presbyterian Women's Missionary society, originally planned for Wednesday, has been postponed until Wednesday, March 22.

MEN LOVE GIRLS WITH PEP

If you are peppy and full of fun, men will love you to dance and parties.

BUT if you are cross, listless and tired, men won't be interested. Men don't like "quiet" girls. When they go to parties they want girls along who are full of pep.

So in case you need a good general system tonic, remember for 3 generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps build up more physical resistance and thus aids in giving you more pep and less distress from female functional disorders.

You'll find Pinkham's Compound WELL WORTH TRYING!

Establishing a new team of mystery comedy stars, Robert Montgomery and Rosalind Russell make their debut in the new field in "Fast and Loose," opening Wednesday to show through Thursday at the State.

Although they have appeared together in three previous pictures, Montgomery and Miss Russell have never before portrayed in their new roles that they reveal in their new vehicle, a rapid-fire mystery comedy which comes as a sequel to last season's comedy hit, "Fast Company."

In Drama First

They first appeared in the film drama, "Trouble for Two," which was followed by the psychological subject involving a murderous maniac, "Night Must Fall." Their third picture "Live, Love and Learn" was their first comedy but it was devoid of mystery.

In "Fast and Loose" Montgomery plays the role of Joel Sloane, a merry madcap of rare book dealers who, in his quest for a rare volume for one of his clients, becomes involved in a carnival of mystifying crimes which he eventually solves as an amateur detective.

Miss Russell steps out of her usual character to play his equally madcap wife, Garda, who only complicates matters by her mirthful meddling and her incidental capture by gangsters.

The two are supported by Reginald Owen in one of his masterful character roles, Ralph Morgan as the millionaire bibliophile, whose mansion becomes the amphitheatre of all the picture's complexities; Etienne Girardot, whose yearnings for a rare volume causes all the trouble; Alan Dinehart, Jo Ann Sayers, and Joan Marsh.

CADETS WIN 3RD TO REMAIN TIED WITH BAPTISTS

Methodists "B" Five and Carroll Clowns Are Ousted

The Carroll Cadets posted a Class B basketball victory at the Memorial building last night to remain unbeaten in the league's round robin tournament. The Baptists also remained undefeated when the Carroll Clowns forfeited their game.

By defeating the Methodists "B" 27-15, the Cadets dropped another team from the tournament. It was the M. E. five's second defeat.

Jim Rogers and Paul Scullion were the high scorers for the Cadets, each chalking up eight points. Bill Segesman dropped in five free throws and one field goal to pace the losers with seven points.

Demings dropped from a first place tie at the hands of Texaco, 32-27. This was Demings' first defeat of the tournament.

P. Kimes found the mark for seven field goals and three free throws to tally 17 points for the victors. Courtney led his team in defeat with nine points.

The Carroll Clowns were dropped from the tournament as a result of their forfeit to the Baptists, leaving six teams to battle it out for the second round championship.

tor from a list of five nominees submitted by the public health council.

A series of amendments, clipping the council's authority over local health boards and local situations, first was approved by the house. A Democratic move to make the council a bi-partisan board, its membership equally divided between the two major parties, prompted the Republican leadership to send the measure back to committee. Most house members agreed it probably would die there.

Gov. John W. Bricker earlier had said it was a "constructive measure" and the bill also had the endorsement of the Ohio Medical association and the Ohio Public Health association.

Highway Protest
The highway department through Harry Metcalf, maintenance chief, vigorously opposed a proposal for centralizing all the state's purchases in a single purchasing department.

Metcalf told the senate committee on economy in state government that "you can't legislate honesty into purchasing," that the proposal would increase costs and involve the department in additional "red tape."

Director Jacob Taylor of the liquor department also advised the committee he wished to appear in opposition to the measure which was introduced, its proponents said, because of disclosures by last year's senate investigation of the state purchasing system.

Metcalf contended that the measure failed to tighten up laws covering state purchases and that a separate purchasing agent was essential for the highway department because of the technical nature of its operations.

Under suspension of the rules, the senate passed and sent to the house a bill to appropriate an additional $40,000 for Ohio's exhibit in the world's fair at New York. Senator Whittemore said the money was needed immediately to permit completion of the Ohio building at the Flushing Bay exposition.

Champion Speller

Word has been received here by John Benedict and family of Aetna st., that his niece, Miss Virginia Guyan of Geistown, Pa., has been named champion speller of the parochial grade schools of that district.

Miss Guyan, eighth grade student in St. Benedict's school, won her honors in competition with 42 other girls and boys from 14 schools in the Johnstown area of the Altoona diocese.

She was presented a prize and her school was awarded the Bishop Richard T. Guilfoyle trophy for one year. Dr. John Stammen, grand knight of the Johnstown, Pa., Knights of Columbus, made the presentations in the absence of the bishop.

to the Poland club for two years as pro before taking a similar post at the Lake Park Fairways course, where he worked for three years.

Miskell copies his game after the style of Jack Thompson, pro at the Southern Hills Country club. Board Names Head Of Bowling Green

LIMA, March 7.—Frank Prout, superintendent of Sandusky City schools for 18 years, today accepted the presidency of Bowling Green university.

Prout was chosen to succeed Dr. R. E. Offenhauer, who was killed Dec. 28 in an automobile accident. Dr. E. B. Pedlow of Lima, chairman of the board of trustees, announced in a terse statement following a three-hour board meeting yesterday that Prout would be given a five-year contract calling for $8,000 the first year, $8,250 the second and $8,500 each the next three.

It was reported that the three Democratic members of the board, L. N. Montgomery of Tiffin, Mrs. Bessie Dwyer of Montpelier, and Dr. Pedlow, favored Prout.

Among those received was Luigi Cardinal Maglione, prefect of the congregation of the council who is an outstanding possibility for the office of secretary of state, an office which the Pope filled when he was Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli.

"MIKOL" WILL BE REPEATED HERE

St. Paul's Group Again
Rehearsing; Date Is March 17

Rehearsals are being held and costumes and sets are being readied for the repeat performance of the all-original musical comedy "Mikol," story of a gypsy musician, which will be presented in the high school auditorium St. Patrick's day, Friday, March 17.

The successful production has been written, scored and presented by members of St. Paul's Catholic club. Rev. Fr. Herbert J. Cooke, advisor of the club, assisted in writing the dialogue and story and supervised the making of sets, scenery and other stage effects.

Eight original songs and several orchestra numbers comprise the musical score of the play, which is further supported by a clever, amusing and, at times, dramatic story. An 18-piece orchestra lends the proper background to the new tunes and provides an appropriate musical theme for the piece. Ray Barnett and Ann Sweeney, members of the club, composed the musical numbers.

Colorful gypsy costumes and settings, vivid portrayal of characters, and swift action vie with the delightful musical interpretation in completing the almost-professional production.

"Mikol" has attracted the attention of amateur theatrical productions and groups in a number of other cities and the audience viewing the repeat performance of the play is expected to include people from out-of-town as well as local friends.

The original cast will be seen, including the following principals: Mrs. Matthew E. Green, Richard Cavanaugh, Carmen McNicol, Peter Fainl, Margaret Entrikin, Rita Munsell, James Steffel, Mary Frances Juergens, Clarence Walker, Mary Elizabeth O'Neil, Winifred Cullinan. A large chorus assists in the musical numbers and play.

U. S. HAS BEST SKATING TEAM

United States' Lineup Is Rated Strongest For
1940 Olympics

ST. LOUIS, March 7.—The United States will place its greatest ice skating team of all time in the 1940 Olympics, it was predicted by Henry Kemper of St. Louis who is chairman of this nation's Olympic ice skating committee.

Kemper's optimistic statement was made following his return from the recent qualifying events held at Oconomowoc, Wis., for next year's Olympic games.

"United States skating officials have a right to be optimistic after watching the qualifying events," said Mr. Kemper. "Our skaters who were forced to participate in all events this year never before gave such a good account of themselves. Remember, in the 1936 Olympic games, United States skaters took but one 'third-place award' Norway won the skating honors with the greatest number of points."

Kemper was particularly pleased with a youngster from San Francisco, George Wallace, who is said to be the greatest American skater of all time.

Another Compliment

"Even Eddie Schroeder whom we have always considered about top was frank to tell me that he believes Wallace is going to be heard from in the next Olympic games," Kemper said.

Kemper told how he had first seen Wallace as a mere novice competing in the 1934 trials at Minneapolis.

"The kid told me at that time that he had one ambition—to become a member of the United States Olympic team," Kemper said. "So last year, at his own expense, young Wallace went to Europe, rode a bicycle for seven months and then joined the Norwegian skating team."

"He was in perfect physical trim and the Norwegian, eager to teach him the European style of skating, soon made a star out of him. When he participated in the trials up in Wisconsin recently, he stood out all by himself."

LA SALLE $1240

AND UP, delivered at Detroit, prices subject to change without notice. Transportation, state and local taxes (if any), optional equipment and accessories—extra.

It's TWICE as good
...and costs HALF as much

AN AMAZING THING has happened to LaSalle during the past seven years. The car has been made at least twice as good—and the price has been reduced more than one half! It is one of the greatest value triumphs the automotive industry has seen. In fact, it is such an amazing thing that the general public has not yet grasped its full significance. This is especially true with regard to price. Thousands of people still believe it takes hundreds of dollars more to buy a LaSalle than it actually does. Don't buy a car without driving LaSalle—and without learning, for yourself, of its unrivalled performance and comfort. Do that—and you'll surely get a LaSalle!
